Welcome New Clinic Students!

The Loyola Law Clinic Fall 2021 Justice Journal

The Stuart H. Smith Law Clinic and Center for Social Justice welcomed a new class of students and offered experiential legal education in the fall semester. Students have been participating in various placements, working on civil rights, immigration, workplace justice, and family law cases. The clinic partners with various organizations and agencies to provide legal services to underrepresented communities.

Civil Rights Division

Students in the Civil Rights Division have been working on a variety of cases, including those involving discrimination and voting rights. They have attended several court hearings and have learned about the complexities of these cases. Students have had the opportunity to work with experienced attorneys and have developed their advocacy skills.

Immigration Section

The Immigration Section has represented clients in numerous asylum cases. One case involved a client who fled from political persecution and sought refuge in the U.S. The section has been working to ensure the safety and rights of these clients.

Misdemeanor Clinic

Students in the Misdemeanor Clinic have been spending time in Orleans Municipal Court, representing indigent defendants in a variety of cases, including traffic violations and theft cases. The clinic has been working to ensure fair and just treatment of these defendants.

Criminal Defense Section

The Criminal Defense Section has been representing defendants in various cases, including those involving violations of the Fair Labor Standards Act. Students have learned about the complexities of these cases and have developed advocacy skills.

Workplace Justice Project

Students have been working with the Workplace Justice Project, which assists low-income workers in enforcing their workplace rights. The project has been working to ensure that workers are paid fairly and are protected from workplace discrimination.

Family Law Section

The Family Law Section has been working on various cases, including those involving custody disputes and special educational needs. Students have had the opportunity to work with clients and develop their advocacy skills.

Civil Rights Division and Immigration Section

The Civil Rights Division and Immigration Section have been working together to advocate for the rights of underrepresented communities. Students have had the opportunity to work on cases involving discrimination and voting rights.

The Loyola Law Clinic has been working to provide legal services to underrepresented communities and has been successful in achieving positive outcomes for its clients. The clinic has been working to ensure that all clients receive fair and just treatment.
